

ABSTRACT

The present invention provides methods and compositions for detecting polymorphic sites by employing bi-directional primer extension reactions. In one embodiment, the present invention provides methods and compositions that minimize cost of reagents, such as labeled nucleotides, and minimize the cost of detection instrumentation.